The Vicksburg Fleet Returned to the Mouth of the White River—Steamer City of Memphis Arrived at Helena with 600 Wounded—The Battle Lasted Three Days—About 3,000 Killed, Wounded, and Missing—Another Expedition on Foot up the White River.

From Our Special Correspondent.

HELENA, Ark., Jan. 9, 1863.

The fleet of Gen. Sherman has returned to the mouth of the White River in safety. His loss in the attack on Vicksburg is about 3,000 in killed, wounded and missing. There are 600 wounded on board the City of Memphis, now at the landing, on their way up the river. The wounds are generally severe. Many of our company and regiment were killed and wounded. Col. Dister of the 55th Ohio Infantry, and Lieut. Col. Fletcher of the 31st Missouri Infantry, and Capt. Dan. Garrard, Capt. Wm. Hegun, and Lieut. Twist of the 22d Kentucky Infantry, and Capt. Seish of the 55th Illinois, were among the killed.

Another expedition is on foot for the White and Arkansas Rivers. Our brave Western army will not remain idle. In great haste, GUILBERT.

THE ATTACK ON VICKSBURG.

Rebel Account of the Affair.

From The Vicksburg Whig, 30th ult.

We mentioned in our issue of Saturday that the enemy were landing on the Yazoo, and that light skirmishing had already commenced. Saturday morning they opened fire from their gunboats, field and ordnance artillery. Troops advanced from four different points, and were handily repulsed. During the day several of the iron-clads, followed by rams and transports, moved up the Yazoo, the former within three-quarters of a mile of our batteries at Snyder's Bluff, and opened fire. Our guns soon commenced belching forth, and for three hours a heavy cannonade was kept up without any damage to our batteries, when the fleet retired some miles down the river, and opened upon the woods and Col. Baker's quarters, where they supposed some of our troops were stationed. As night came on the firing ceased on both sides, the enemy having been driven back on land and water.

Our troops remained in the intrenchments all night, and just as the day was dawning in the east on Sunday morning, the sharp crack of musketry, the thud and boom of bombs, and the shrill whistle of rifle balls, indicated that the enemy had advanced again, and were firing with renewed velocity. At several points along the lines, from the Chickasaw Bayou down to the Indian mound, a distance of about two miles, the enemy advanced, but were signally repulsed. Between 11 and 12 o'clock there was very heavy firing on our left, at the mound, the works in front of which were held by the 3d Indiana Regiment, Col. C. H. Morrison. The enemy appeared on the east side of McNitt's Lake, but were soon forced back. The firing on the right, at Chickasaw Bayou, was very heavy for a while, but our troops succeeded in compelling the enemy to fall back. In the afternoon an artillery duel was fought at the mound on our left, in which we came out victorious and without any loss. The troops all fought most gallantly. In the Saturday night fight the 17th Louisiana Regiment, Col. Richardson, repulsed three regiments of the enemy, and on Sunday day the 23d Louisiana Regiment, Col. Thomas, drove four regiments back and maintained their position for hours.

The troops engaged all behaved very gallantly, but special mention is made of the conduct of the two Louisiana regiments we have particularized. It is impossible to form any estimate of the enemy's loss, as they were invariably in the woods, and whenever a man or a company was driven back, they were lost. Our loss there is quite small, considering the amount of fighting that has been done. In the 17th Louisiana we could learn of but one being killed and two wounded, viz: Privately Clayton of Company B, head shot off; Orderly Sergeant McDonald of Company H, leg shot off; Privately Richard of Company H, slightly wounded in the leg. The killed and wounded in the 23d, 25th, and 31st Louisiana Regiments we have not been able to ascertain. The loss, however, is small. Three prisoners were captured on Sunday morning belonging to Company B, 57th Ohio Volunteers. From one of them we learn that the troops on the Yazoo are commanded by Gen. Morgan.

LATER.

Yesterday afternoon 5,000 of the enemy advanced on our right wing, in the vicinity of Chickasaw Bayou to storm the works, but were mowed down in large numbers, and upward of four hundred taken prisoners, together with five standards of colors. The remainder then fell back, when a flag of truce was sent in for permission to bury the dead, under which some of the prisoners made their escape. The fight was still going on late last evening on our left.

THE BATTLE OF THE 23TH ULT.

The Appeal's correspondent writes as follows from the "battle-field before Vicksburg," Monday, December 23:

One of the most brilliant battles of the war has just closed early this morning. The 2d and 30th Tennessee Regiments were ordered by Gen. Greeng, our Brevet Commander, to report to Gen. Lee, and were by him placed in the ditches before the works, where the enemy were in plain view, missing a force which the General foresaw was to charge our works. They were supported by a large number of field pieces, which had been constantly firing upon us since early in the morning, our batteries replying all the time.

Pretty soon after we took our position in the pits—having been moved from the front position assigned us by Gen. Lee—when the enemy moved out of the ditches, crossing a muddy ravine or marsh, and charged upon the works occupied by the above-named regiments. They had to advance through an open field, which gave us a fair shot at them. We opened upon them, as soon as they came in reach, a most terrific fire, mowing them down on every side, and during the whole time the artillery was keeping up an incessant fire, which, aided by the terrible noise produced by the explosion of shells and screams of shot, to the terror of the enemy.

When they had advanced to within about 100 yards of our works, our fire became too hot for them; they fell back, at first slowly, and afterward they fled in perfect disorder and confusion, leaving their dead and wounded on the field, which was immediately occupied by our men. The only forces engaged on our side were the 2d and 30th Tennessee, in all about 900 men. The enemy advanced upon us with five or six regiments, not less than 5,000 men; we drove them from the field, capturing about 200 prisoners killed and wounded about 250, most of whom fell into our hands, and we brought four standards of colors from the field.
